To the ladies of the Bangor Anti-Slavery Society

«Clifton House, near Rotherham, York, England» The writer has received the addressees' printed circular through C. L. Remond, and has met Garrison and his friends. The ladies of the Sheffield Anti-Slavery Society have asked the writer to be their president. The writer is sending contributions through Mr. Garrison to the addressees' forthcoming sale. Explains that all of the music is the writer's own composition, the drawings are by her daughter and the "maps of matrimony" were done by both.

«Lemmy Greene(?) Sheffield, England» Reports on the activities of Henry C. Wright and Frederick Douglass. Of H.C.Wright: "we have greatly enjoyed his fireside society." Tells about his various meetings, including one attended by 700-800 children. Of F. Douglass: "I feel almost afraid to trust myself to speak of this dear friend so highly do I estimate his moral & intellectual character." Praises his speeches. H.C. Wright and F. Douglass left Leeds for New Castle, to spend a few hours with Elizabeth Pease at Darlington.

To "My dear friend" «Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman?» No.62

«Leavy Greane(?) Sheffield, Engl.» The contribution to the Bazaar from this place being so small this year, the writer has sent the articles to Manchester, to be included in the box from there. Mentions some of the articles, especially one sent by a little girl, Hannah Wall, whom F. Douglass will doubtless remember. Expresses anxiety about the condition of Garrison and satisfaction in knowing that H.C. Wright will take care of him.

To «Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman»

«Wigham Hill, Walthamston, Essex» The writer takes much pleasure in contributing to the (Boston) bazaar. Having received from the addressee a number of autographs of "those who had distinguished themselves in the anti-slavery movement," the writer requests in addition those of Wendell Phillips and others. Would also much like to have Mrs.(Eliza Lee) Follen's. The writer's mother, nearly eighty years old and with failing eyesight, has knitted a dozen pair of garters for the bazaar. The writer's sister Caroline has made the pencil drawings; mentions those of Thomas Clarkson's residence.

To Francis Jackson Garrison

«Warrington, England» The writer says the English think the South should have the right to choose its form of government. Says the North has no right to "interfere by force of arms in the government of the South." Deplores the Northern worship of the ideal of the Union. Says a long war will dampen Northern enthusiasm for the Union. Conquest of the South is an impossibility. Discusses the Canadian Revolution of 1837. Speaks of the overwhelming military power of the North. Regrets that the Abolitionists have sunk from the level of "Universal Men" to that of Americans. Criticizes the action of the American officials in t[illegible]an Jacinto case.

«Whitby, England» The writer announces the shipment of a box of contributions. Tells of his efforts to get low freight rates. Wants to know when the contributions should reach Boston to be in time for the A-S Fair. Suggests getting the results of the Fair written up and sent to England earlier in the year. Mentions the English tour of Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe. Also Rev. Samuel R. Ward and Professor Allen. The writer gives instructions concerning the correspondence included in the box, and a brief account of the contents. Says he has not heard from Dr. Dewey.

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman No.108

<Wrexham, England> The writer emphasizes the wrongness of the Evangelical Alliance in respect to antislavery feeling. The enthusiasm with which George Thompson, Garrison, and F. Douglass were received has proved that "the Evangelical Alliance is not the British Public." These three were entertained in the writer's little town; the meeting was "the best ever held in our town." Douglass "has been working wonders." The writer is enthusiastic about Garrison, and praises George Thompson, who "has had to expose some who were his dearest friends." The writer hopes to meet H.C. Wright next week. [?] The writer tells about the approaching marriage of a sister of Mrs. James Webb near Antrim, Ireland. Says this event will delay his collecting merchandise for the Anti-Slavery Bazaar. A speech of Garrison at the N. E. Convention "defines the precise position of the Am. A. S. so completely" that the writer plans to print it in the Anti-Slavery Advocate. Wants his address given to Dr. Bailey. "The Era is ably edited in his absence and contained some deeply interesting articles. Talks about Dr. (William?) Elder's defense of the Bible at a convention in Hartford. Refers to a letter of S. May Jr. which dealt with Gradualism.

«Belfast, » "An intense interest has been excited by the powerful oratory of Frederick Douglas«s» during his late visit to this town and in consequence a female Antislavery Society is about being formed..." If the warm impulses roused could have a fair development, "there is scarcely a lady in Belfast who would not be anxious to join," but the usual leaders in good works, "offended by the uncompromising tone of Mr. Douglas«s» in regard to the Free Church of Scotland," are either enemies or "hollow friends." A useful step would be made if especially the young people could be united in some work. A few lines, therefore, from the addressee, mentioning articles suitable [illegible] the Boston fair, would induce many to make a beginning. [illegible]s been whispered that F.Douglass was an impostor and insinuated that C.L.Remond was a white man.

«Belfast, Ireland» The writer requests information "which will enable us to make an appeal to the public on behalf of your Bazaar." Stresses especially the need of awakening "the sympathies of shildhood in behalf of the oppressed," and therefore of calling the attention of mothers and governnesses to the evils of slavery. The Irish emigrants "intellectually prepared to sympathize" with the colored people would exert a different influence in their new homes than is now frequently manifested.

To the Secretary of the Boston Female Anti-slavery Society

«Belfast, Ireland» Presents, in behalf of the Belfast Ladies Antislavery Association, a box of contributions to the fair. Discusses valuation in respect to custom duty. Although the muslin used is coarse, it is "unpolluted by slave labour." The Belfast Association's committee, in consideration of the tendency of Irish emigrants to have their minds open to prejudice and so to join the proslavery ranks, have turned to the schools of Ireland "as a fitting theatre for antislavery effort."In view of this, they must not present themselves to the public as exclusive adh[illegible]ts of either the Garrisonian or the Liberty party.

«12 April?» Vol.18
To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman No.28

«Cork, Ireland» The writer appreciates the addressee's wanting to give her some American autographs, but does not want her to take so much trouble. Admires the addressee's letter to the local Anti-Slavery society. Rejoices that interest in the cause is increasing. "The relation of his own suffering by Moses Grandy has done much good." Dr. (Richard Robert) Madden, who has just been here, is deeply interested in the cause.

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman

«Cork, Ireland» The writer begins with a discussion of the packaging and shipment of a box of merchandise for the the Anti-Slavery fair. "We have this year got donations from the gentlemen's Anti-Slavery Society ... they have got a new secretary who though a clergyman is most liberal in his opinions ..." Says that Father Theobald Mathew is several thousand pounds in debt. He has had a misunderstanding with the Dublin committee over his post as a traveling agent. Spent a lot of money on Temperance medals. Writer likes the Nat. Anti-Slavery Standard better, but misses Mrs. L. M. Child's articles. Wishes she could have sent fewer and better articles to the Anti-Slavery f [illegible] Praises the Martyr Age.

[Cork, Ireland] Explains at length the reason for the possible late arrival of the bo from Cork. Describes the impression made by Frederick Douglass. "There never was a person who made a greater sensation in Cork amongst all religious bodies." The Methodists are still angry about his statements after three weeks. "In private he is greatly to be liked... He is the first intelligen slave who has ever visited Cork." The writer saw little of James N. Buffum. "We all liked him and felt for his homesickness." Conditions in Ireland are improving; the potato disease seems to be arrested by the frost.

«35 Patrick Hill, Cork, Ireland» The writer submits a poem for publication in the Liberty Bell. Praises F. Douglass as a lecturer. Mentions especially his farewell speech on Texas: "his spirit seemed to burn indignantly ..." His lectures were generally well attended in Cork. The writer and her sisters take great pleasure in preparing little things for the Boston bazaar, and soon they will be packing the box. They receive numbers of the Anti-Slavery Standard from their uncle, Joseph Beale of New York.

.(Cork,Ireland). In order to save duty, the prices on the articles sent for the Boston fair have been marked at one third of the prices they are expected to fetch. The writer requests the addressee to send a few newspapers giving an account of the fair. All the brushes sent from "poor men" are from those in the Messrs Narian's brush manufactory. Miss Esther Bright, sister of John Bright, M.P., sent a parcel of "nice things," but, having been delayed, they will have to remain till next year. Mentions the impression made by Frederick Douglass' lectures. Several pieces of poetry have been composed in honor of Douglass' visit. The writer

[Cork, Ireland?] The contributions (to the Boston fair) are less than they would have been if it were not for the distress among the working people. Also, contributions would have been more "if Frederick Douglass and Mr. Garrison had come as we hoped." Douglass has made "many warm and affectionate friends in this city." A bazaar is to be held for the relief of the poor. Discusses the failure of the potato crop. The writer gives her ideas on the future influence for good of the lives of abolitionists, which may be greater than the evil done by slavery.

«Cork (Ireland)» Announces the sending of contributions from the Cork Ladies Anti-Slavery Society. Regrets that these are not more valuable, but nearly all members had to work for two local bazaars. Some people have asked "what alteration has been caused by the Bazaars in the state of feeling in the United States." Suggests that this question might be treated in the little Bazaar Gazette. A good supply of Gazettes is desired for the purpose of keeping up interest. If the Rochester bazaar comes off this year, some contributions would have to be sent there, as F. Douglass was instrumental in securing new members.

Praises the diligence of the Misses Jones, now Mrs. Haycroft and Mrs. Plant, who worked the "Departure of Rebecca." They became interested in Abolitionism through F. Douglass. "He roused a feeling which no one else had done ..." Praises Douglass's North Star. The United States are little known in Cork "except as a place to send emigrants to ..." [?] The writer would prefer a portrait of "any of the Boston clique" to "those musty Puritan books," (possibly a gift of Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society). Referring to H. C. Wright's description of Daniel O'Connell, the writer does not think it would be easy to find "one who gives such a wrong impression by his flying style." Does not consider O'Connell "a morally great man." Inquires about Thomas Davis. Thinks that some of N. P. Rogers's writing "wants the sparkling brilliance of other days."

Dublin, Ireland. The writer refers to her experience of crossing the Atlantic to attend the so-called World Convention, which proved to be only a conference of the British & Foreign Anti-Slavery Society, whose Committee of Arrangements ruled out the attendance of women as delegates. The writer's attempt, with Anne Knight, Elizabeth Pease and a few others, to have a public meeting called for women was given up in despair. The acclaim which the writer received at her public appearances at Birmingham and Dublin furnished "proof that the objection to our admission were all hollow." The writer defends her conduct in ans[illegible]o Abby Kelley's question if she has "sacrificed princip[illegible]t the altar of Peace." Admires the stand of Wendell and Ann Phillips in the matter of women's representation.

«Dublin, Ireland» Ann Allen asks the writer about the addressee and the chances of Joshua Leavitt's return to Garrisonian doctrines. "In Scotland the lines are drawn." Praises Elizabeth Pease. J. J. Gurney is vindictively trying to hurt the Anti-Slavery cause. His letters to Amelia Opie "are most false and hypocritical." Discourses on Irish affairs. Says that Joseph Sturge has gone to see D. O'Connell. Wishes that G. Thompson had gone to Boston instead of Bombay. Inquires about Abby Kelley. Compares the people of Old and New England.

⸢Dublin?⸣ A letter about an article for the Liberty Bell written by "a fine young Irishman of 22," and John R. French and Stephen S. Foster. Says, "I do not choose it to be true that French is in the wrong, yet fear from the letter that it must be so..." Foster seems to the writer "a sombre man" and French "a warm young fellow, more like an Irishman." Remarks of the differences of opinion between Henry C. <34 Eccles St., Dublin> T. Davis of Providence sent the writer T. Parker's Discourses. The writer is a Unitarian but finds among the adherents of this church "as much coldness toward human improvement" as among those of other sects. "Teetotalism is my favorite hobby." Discusses the question of British trade with Brazil. The writer considers all slave-grown produce as stolen goods. Free trade with Brazil would cause increased exploitation of Africans. "Can there be a doubt that your increase of slavery is owing to our great trade with you?" The writer has appealed to the London Committee "to cry out against all slave produce." Contrasts the addressee's Non-Resistance [illegible] his own attitude toward government action. James H. W[illegible] brother of R. D. Webb, professes to be "more of an absolute Non-resistant than any of us." The Irish people are now almost wholly absorbed in their political troubles. As Daniel O'Connell has a horror of bloodshed, "while he lives, I believe we shall be safe from the calamity of civil war." Irish agitation is a security for the peace of Europe, as England, if invaded, would get no help from Ireland. The teetotal reform "is producing glorious results in this land." Educational conditions are also improving somewhat. The writer is glad that the addressee liked his essay in the Liberty Bell.

«35 Eccles St., Dublin» The writer has no objection to the addressee's publishing of parts of a former letter. D. O'Connell and his companions have been set free, to the frenzied joy of the people. The writer did not attend the public dinner, which was disgraced by much drinking. Comments on the Temperance movement. Contrasts American and Irish teetotalism. Father Matthews's influence is still great. However, he has spent his own and other property on the cause, so that an appeal in his behalf is necessary. The writer tells of his own conversion to teetotalism. His wife died over fifteen years ago, leaving him with four daughters and a son. Thanks the addressee for her free [illegible]ession of sentiment on the sugar question, although s[illegible]s not convinced him. Argues

"This book is a curious farrago of hydropathy, nonresistance anti sabbath, anti church, & anti ministry," wholly unsuited to the atmosphere of Scotland. Wright has been denouncing the Free Church for accepting money from slaveholders. While he was here (in Dublin?) he "was abhorred & avoided by all outside our very small circle." The Misses Hildreth, zealous anti-slavery ladies, were with him. The writer read (Richard) Hildreth's attack on (O.A.) Brownson and (Andrews) Norton, and would like to see his Theory of Morals. James Haughton and the writer read with delight Wendell Phillips on the anti-voting theory. "He writes with a pen of light & speaks with a tongue of flame." Regrets that Garrison published a letter in which the writer referred to (N.P.) Rogers, since he specially requested it should not be printed. «Dublin, Ireland» Dublin seems to be in a profound calm; O'Connell is somewhere, but not yet acting vigorously. "Repeal" is very dear to the people's heart, but the writer thinks that "much of what they expect of it is perfectly Eutopian «sic»" Some counties present a serious exception to the general calm; gives instances of trouble. Reports on teetotalism in Ireland; "there are whole districts in which there is scarcely a pledge breaker known." Mentions the apathy of the middle and upper classes. The cause of peace is promoted little in Ireland, except by the writer's "little knot," which the Evening Mail, a Tory p[illegible] styled "Everythingarians." The writer, referring to Natha[illegible] P. Rogers, laments: "Poor Rogers - poor Rogers!"

«Dublin, Ireland» R. D. Webb is in Cork with F. Douglass and J. N. Buffum, who "appear to be warmly received there." The writer has finished copying Mary Howitt's article. It shall be sent in the bazaar box as it may be worth something "as the autograph of a delightful woman & famous authoress." Considers the article "better suited to a keepsake wreath or Bijou than to your vigorous bell." The Hutchinson family has gone to Manchester to be seen and heard at the Free Trade bazaar. R. D. Webb wishes the singing of the Hutchinsons had more variety. " ... the provincialism of some of their comic effects prevents them from be[illegible] appreciated." The writer remarks: "We get a wonderful [illegible]ety of people from your shores." Comments regretful[illegible]n the case of N. P. Rogers, and analyzes his nature.

«35 Eccles St. Dublin, Ireland» Compares American with trans-Atlantic anti-slavery. "We... have no such opposition to encounter; every blow we strike against the monster - Slavery - brings us honor & credit, with the the people." Admits that some of the so-called better classes "look upon us as enthusiasts, & I am even considered by some a little light in the head." In Ireland we have to work upon apathetic & indifferent hearts," and so their zeal would probably cool if it were not "warmed by your devotion to the cause of humanity."
